This guide offers a list of supportive services, treatment programs, and community resources available to pregnant and parenting individuals in Northern New Jersey and surrounding regions.

Serving Bergen, Essex, Hudson, Morris, Passaic, Sussex, Union, and Warren Counties

The Perinatal Addictions Prevention Project is a statewide substance use screening, prevention, and education initiative funded by the New Jersey Department of Health

The Perinatal Addictions Prevention Project

---

---

The Perinatal Addictions Prevention Project (PAPP) is a program under the Partnership for Maternal and Child Health of Northern New Jersey. Funded by the New Jersey Department of Health through the Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorders (FASD) grant, PAPP provides education, screening, and support to pregnant and postpartum individuals around alcohol and other substance use. The program offers education to all individuals on the effects of substance use during pregnancy, increases community and provider awareness of FASD and related risks, and connects families to culturally responsive resources, treatment services, and ongoing support.

New Jersey Maternal & Child Health Consortia

The consortia are private, nonprofit organizations licensed and regulated by the NJ Department of Health as central service facilities. They include, as members, perinatal and pediatric providers, hospitals, consumers, and community-based agencies, as well as any group or individual with an interest in health services for families.

The consortia's primary functions are to provide prevention activities, consumer and professional education, total quality management, data analysis, infant and pediatric follow-up, coordination of perinatal/pediatric transport systems, and the development of comprehensive perinatal/pediatric regional plans.
